SUMMARY

Full Professor of Artificial Intelligence at Sapienza University of Rome, where I lead the RSTLess group (Robust, Safe, and Transparent Machine Learning) and coordinate the Ph.D. Programme in Data Science. Before Sapienza I spent eight years in industry, at Yahoo Labs, Facebook Search and Facebook (now Meta) AI, shipping production systems for sponsored search, query understanding and platform integrity.

Three lines of work define my research profile. Retrieval and retrieval-augmented generation: retrieval for RAG has to be designed around the LLM reader rather than classical relevance, together with the evaluation protocols that follow from it. Geometric and graph machine learning: sheaf neural networks for hypergraphs and recommendation, counterfactual explanations for graph models, and model merging with reduced task interference. Safety and content integrity: misinformation detection, learning with noisy labels, and child-safety models deployed at Meta.

Nearly 200 peer-reviewed publications, h-index 52, over 10,700 citations (Google Scholar, October 2026). Eight granted US patents. ECIR 2018 Test-of-Time Award and finalist for the ERCIM Cor Baayen Award. General Chair of ECIR 2025, Programme Committee Chair of CIKM 2026, ELLIS Fellow.

SCIENTIFIC AND INDUSTRIAL RESULTS

Main results at Sapienza

Since joining Sapienza in 2021, Fabrizio Silvestri has founded and leads the RSTLess research group (Robust, Safe, and Transparent Machine Learning) and coordinates the Ph.D. Programme in Data Science. The main results achieved are:

Retrieval-Augmented Generation: showed that retrieval for RAG must be rethought around the LLM reader rather than classical relevance (The Power of Noise, SIGIR 2024, among the most cited RAG papers), and followed up with new evaluation protocols and analyses of positional bias and distractors (EACL 2026 oral, EMNLP 2025, ACL 2026).
Sheaf neural networks: introduced sheaf-based models for hypergraphs and recommendation (Sheaf Hypergraph Networks, NeurIPS 2023; Directional Sheaf Hypergraph Networks, ICLR 2026; Sheaf4Rec, ACM TORS).
Interpretability of LLMs: geometric characterization of attention sinks and wavelet-like positional behaviour in Transformers (NeurIPS 2025; ACL 2025, SAC Highlights).
Model merging and efficient adaptation: Task Singular Vectors (CVPR 2025) and MASS (ICLR 2026) for merging fine-tuned models with reduced task interference.
Trustworthy ML: counterfactual explanations for GNNs and recommender systems (AISTATS 2022, SIGIR 2023, KDD 2026), learning with noisy labels (CVPR 2023, IEEE TAI 2026), and misinformation detection (OSNEM 2023, IJCAI 2022 survey).
Funding and leadership: Principal Investigator of the PRIN 2022 project NEREO and of HUMANE within the SERICS extended partnership; participant in the FAIR (PNRR) partnership on AI and in SoBigData; industrial research collaborations with Huawei (task unlearning in LLMs), Spotify, Amazon, and You.com.
Community service: General Chair of ECIR 2025 and Programme Committee Chair of CIKM 2026, both held in Italy.
Supervision: 14 Ph.D. students currently supervised (7 as main supervisor, 7 co-supervised), 2 postdocs, and 12 Ph.D. graduates at Sapienza, now postdocs at Sapienza, researchers at Amazon, or startup founders.

Main results at You.Com

Since 2026, Fabrizio Silvestri consults for You.Com on search engineering, contributing to the design and development of a new search technology for the You.Com platform. Work covers retrieval architecture and the integration of LLM-based generation with the search pipeline.

Main results at Spotify

Between 2022 and 2023, Fabrizio Silvestri consulted for Spotify Technology S.A. on Graph Neural Network technology for search and recommendation. Together with the Spotify search team, he developed a graph learning approach to exploratory query suggestions for Spotify's instant search system, published at CIKM 2023 (Graph Learning for Exploratory Query Suggestions in an Instant Search System). The model learns from the graph connecting queries, entities, and user interactions to surface exploratory suggestions beyond simple query completion.

Main results at Facebook AI

At Facebook (now Meta) AI, within the Integrity Research organization. Shipped a graph-based misinformation model to production that outperformed the incumbent baseline; the model uses Graph Neural Networks over the co-interaction structure of posts. Also launched, with my team, a model predicting interactions between adults and minors at higher precision than the system then in production, cutting the number of children exposed to groomers on the platform. Meta does not permit publication of the underlying figures, so they are omitted here.

Main results at Facebook Search

At Facebook (now Meta) Search, set up a team to build query suggestion products and single-handedly launched a new product on the Facebook search result page: "Related Searches". In the later part of this tenure my team produced a word embedding robust to misspellings, deployed in the production query classifier; it raised the classifier's F1 and cut the volume of offensive queries shown to users. Meta does not permit publication of the underlying figures, so they are omitted here.

Main results at Yahoo Labs

Primarily worked on Yahoo Gemini platform. Contributed to:

Launched a dwell time prediction component deployed to the Gemini Native ad serving platform with a solution based on random survival forest uplifting the measured dwell time by 20%.
Launched a solution based on word embedding for query rewriting and query ad matching within Gemini Search resulting in more than 9% uplift in revenue corresponding to tens of millions of dollars in revenue in 2015.
Launched a solution based on information retrieval techniques to compute the relevance of an ad to a query in order to reduce the amount of ads considered not relevant resulting in an increase of 6% in CTR; also, filtered out 80% of editorially annotated bad cases.

Main results at ISTI-CNR

While at ISTI-CNR, Fabrizio Silvestri has worked on Search algorithms and technologies. Query log analysis. Big data analysis science and technologies. Social network analysis. The main results achieved are:

Built one of the first distributed search engines during Ph.D. thesis work. Conducted research on Search and IR algorithms. Results published in major venues in the respective fields.
Participated actively in the design, development, and launch of the Italian search engine Istella (http://istella.it) in collaboration with Tiscali.
Led EU-funded research network on distributed computing. Coordinated unit with members from several European universities and industries. Managed budget of about 250K Euros.
